As one of the leading Universities in the region, the University of Nairobi has once again set new heights by being the only institution of higher learning to be awarded the new International Organization for Standardization, (ISO), by Kenya Standards Bureau, (KEBS). The certificate was received by Vice-Chancellor, Prof. Peter Mbithi on Wednesday, August, 2, 2017.

Speaking during the Senate meeting at the Council Chambers, the Vice-Chancellor observed that the 9001:2008 ISO standardization has been replaced by the new ISO 9001:2015 after successful audit by KEBS.

Key components of the new standard include its scope, quality policy, quality objectives, six main processes, 32 sub processes and 81 procedures. "We must all conform to this. All university processes like admissions, staff and student disciplinary cases, examinations, graduations, need to follow the guidelines," said Prof. Mbithi. Risk based thinking has been integrated into the Quality Management System (QMS) process. This will enable the University to take action to address any risks or opportunities the QMS may highlight.

The new standard is customer focused and hence institutions and organizations being awarded the standard have put great emphasis on ensuring that customers are happy. Service delivery is paramount. Customer complaints and criticism are addressed accordingly.

The ISO9001: 2015 certification marks the fifth major revision, of the University Quality Management System

Speaking on behalf of the Managing Director, KEBS, Mr. Eric Chesire, Director Quality Assurance, KEBS, observed that the customer focused standard will bring immense benefits to the University, key among them being : better process integration, improved evidence for decision making, creating a continual improvement culture, engagement of staff, improvement of customer satisfaction and improvement in the credibility and image of the university.

At the same Senate meeting, Deans, Directors and Heads of Departments from the Central Administration signed their 2017/2018 performance contract, which is in line with the 14th cycle performance contracting guidelines which resonate with the public expectations, demonstrates progressive achievement of Vision 2030 targets, benchmarks with international best practices and is fully aligned to the University strategic plan and approved budgets.

Since 2005, the University of Nairobi, through the University Council has been on performance contract with the government through the Ministry of Education. The University is therefore expected to achieve and surpass their targets.
